Interesting and Valuable Curiosity.

A wonderful old document is at present in Canada, being nothing less than the skin or parchment signed 230 years ago by the Scottish people, and known as the "National Covenant of Scotland."
The substance of the deed is written in a firm, beautiful hand, almost unique in its kind; the signatures of the noblemen, including the famous Montrose, and many of the others, are very distinct, as also are those obliterated in the blood of their subscribers, while the whole parchment is in a good state of preservation. This celebrated old document is without doubt a relic of the translationary market, examining of the market without doubt a relic of the translation of the problem o troublous times which gave it existence. No era of Scotland's history claims more interest or presents greater charm FURNISHING than the memorable year 1638, when on the 1st day of March its vigorous and on the 1st day of March its vigorous and high-minded people, oppressed by restrictions on their religious liberty, and roused to resistance by the attempts of the King and his ambitious prelate to its later their consciences by foreing upon them a liturgy opposed to their Presby-terian notion of simple worship, rose up en masse, and, with unanimity of views and feelings unparalelled, subscribed to the National Covenant of Scotland.

THE DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM.—The platform adopted by the Democratic Convention is a strange mixture of fact and fustian, of courage and duplicity, of propositions that are lucid and propositions that are muddy. It is bold to the verge of rashness in regard to finances, equivocal in its allusions to reconstruction, confused in its exposition of fiscal and administrative reforms, diffuse and turgid in its arraignment of the ruling party. It is the work, apparently, of different hands-one having the nerve 1d-tf inspired by clear and strong conviction, another accustomed to manipulate the commonplaces of partisan confessions of faith, and a third crippled and weak under a burden of words through which we search vainly for precision or fairness .- N.
